

Alexander von Humboldt Professorship

International Award for Research in Germany

On the strength of an endowment from the Federal Ministry of Education and Research in the context of the International Research Fund for Germany, the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation grants awards to academics of all disciplines from abroad, who are internationally recognised as leaders in their field, allowing them to pursue ground-breaking research at universities and research institutions in Germany. Virtually unaffected by administrative constraints, they will enjoy a high degree of freedom in creating their own working conditions.

Academics from abroad are eligible to be nominated for this International Award for Research in Germany if they are at the forefront of their discipline and are expected to contribute to enhancing Germany's sustained international competitiveness as a research location in consequence of the award.

The award funds, totalling 5 million EUR for academics in experimental disciplines and 3.5 million EUR for researchers in theoretical disciplines, are made available over a period of five years, which can be extended by up to two years. Even by international standards, this sponsorship allows award winners to profit from competitive general conditions that create the basis for a long-term academic future in Germany. This applies both to their personal income and the financial resources for their research work.

Universities and non-university research institutions in Germany profit from academic expertise from abroad and thus gain support for their own strategic (re-)orientation. It is also an opportunity for them to attract established, cutting-edge researchers from abroad to their own institutions on an enduring basis, in order to invigorate their international cooperation and to consolidate any links resulting from it.

The Alexander von Humboldt Foundation aims to achieve a good balance between genders and a high level of diversity among its fellows in all areas. We therefore expressly welcome the nomination of female researchers, younger researchers and members of underrepresented groups who have distinguished themselves through outstanding achievements and thereby have a lasting impact on their academic discipline.

Nomination entitlement

The award is granted on the recommendation of others. Nominations may be submitted by German universities; non-university research institutions may also submit nominations jointly with a German university. Nominations must be forwarded to the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation through the rector or president of the respective university or, where applicable, the academic director or head of the non-university research institution.

Nomination requirements

Nominations may be submitted on behalf of top-rank researchers of all disciplines working abroad who are eligible to be appointed to full professorships in Germany. Academics of German nationality are also eligible to be nominated provided that they have established their academic careers abroad. Academics working in Germany may not be nominated for this award.

The decisive criteria for selecting award winners are the nominee's academic qualification and the persuasiveness of the concept outlining the nominee's importance for and prospective involvement in the process of achieving the nominating institution's strategic goals. On the one hand it is thus assumed that the Alexander von Humboldt Professorship will contribute to the internationalisation of especially promising research areas in Germany; on the other, it is expected that synergies will be achieved in the focus and structure of the academic environment at the receiving institution. Even though the award winners will be at the centre of the sponsorship provided by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation, they will also be the starting point for sustainable structural change both at the receiving universities and research institutions as well as in their environment. As such, they should act as a catalyst for the continuation of development at the receiving institution.

The nominating institution must therefore demonstrate how it intends to ensure that the award winner's future academic work in his/her field of research will have a decisive impact, in particular on the following:

- honing the unique profile of the university/research institution by international standards
- taking the university/research institution into the top league worldwide
- achieving greater international visibility for the university/research institution
- sustainably promoting Germany as a location for research.

Furthermore, nominators must explain how they intend to continue the award winner's long-term affiliation to their institution, even after Humboldt Foundation sponsorship has come to an end (this should usually entail appointment to a W3 professorship or directorship).

Applications may be submitted both prior to appointment or advertising procedures and during ongoing appointment procedures.

Up to ten award winners will be selected annually by an independent selection committee of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation which will usually meet six to seven months after the closing date, i.e. in April and October. Selection will be based on an independent, peer review.

Use of award funds

The award funds are made available over a period of five years to finance the award winner's research in Germany. An extension of the funding period by up to two years is possible. Award winners may draw over a period of five years up to 180,000 EUR p.a. from the award funds for their personal incomes. In duly justified cases the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation may, upon application of the receiving institution, agree to an increase of this amount to up to 250,000 EUR p.a. Other income, including additional salary payments by the receiving institution or from third parties, will not be set against this.

The Humboldt Foundation particularly welcomes measures on the part of the nominating institution to promote equal opportunities for women academics.
