Mina Mustermann is an Assistant Professor at Goethe University, Germany. She holds a PhD in Resource Economics from the University of Toronto. Mina studied economics at Trinity College Dublin and received her MA in physics at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Since 2007 she lives in Kenya and mainly works on the nexus between people and nature. One of her main research interests is the economics of climate change and the socio-economic dimensions of adaptation, particularly to rising temperatures. Mina's engagement in climate change issues started in 2006 through advocacy work with Greenpeace Africa and has shifted to the science-policy interface in 2010 as one of the fellows of the first cohort of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation International Climate Protection Fellowship.
